Re: [EBS - Ritchie Bros. Auctioneers] Question regarding recently applied Oracle patch - What would Rimini Street do in this circumstance?

Hi Craig,

This is a pretty big patch, with normal Oracle Financials features in it. Regular AP and AR, and accounting business logic is not a problem for us, and we can modify and create new reports, SQL's, etc. We can also create data and templates without any problem.

There are also some JAVA libraries in the patch. Technically we can work on them, and modify files without any problem, but that requires a lot development commitment, if we are requested to modify a lot of entities there.

The patch itself is an accumulative one, with fixes and patches from AP, AR, subledger accounting and Web ADI. We will not be able to generate such a big patch, but we can fix the issues one by one, handled by this patch.

Thanks.

Craig Mackereth---07/07/2014 11:26:31 AM---Chen, I have a simple question related to the below patch question from the prospective customer:

Subject: [EBS - Ritchie Bros. Auctioneers] Question regarding recently applied Oracle patch - What would Rimini Street do in this circumstance?

Chen,

I have a simple question related to the below patch question from the prospective customer:

Q. Is there any part of the PATCH 13640667 that the below customer applied which Rimini Street could not have produced?

They are worried that we couldn't provide an equivalent solution and while m first instinct is to say "of course we would provide a RSI patch" I wanted to check we're not going to bounce into any closed code issues with this.

Can you let me know by no later than 10:00 PST tomorrow (Tuesday) please?

Thanks

Subject: Ritchie Bros. Auctioneers question regarding recently applied Oracle patch - What would Rimini Street do in this circumstance?

Hi Craig,

The details of the patch are in a MS Word doc all the way at the bottom of this message. I believe that the prospect was having the specific error called out in the patch description. The patch also, of course, 'fixes' many other thinfs as well in EBS aside from the primary problem. They want to know if Rimini Street could have provided a solution to this particular problem.

Hi Venice,

Thanks for your time this morning, definitively interesting

I know you are sending me some materials shortly but just because we had to apply a patch to Prod this afternoon and we just had our call thought I would ask you this:

Let's say we had ditched Oracle this February 2014, then last week we run into the issue fixed by attached code patch from Oracle (April 2014 patch)
What kind of solution would Rimini offer?

Thanks
